IT'S FOR YOU: Matthew Hamilton, left, and Bryn Gray unveiled the new pay telephone at Archie Stouffer Elementary School last Wednesday. Gray and Hamilton had to convince Bell Canada to allow the phone to be placed in the school, and the two boys say support from the board of Education was the deciding factor. The first call the pair placed was to the Director of Education, Stuart Baker. Unfortunately, Baker wasn't in at the time.

Doctors, MPP oppose misuse of hospital donations

The notion of using donated money to pay architect fees for the Haliburton Hospital expansion project has raised the ire of local doctors and MPP John Eakins.

"To even think of using citizens' donations sends out the wrong signal," Eakins said last week.

The Victoria-Haliburton MPP was responding to a suggestion by the St. Joseph's Hospital Board that the costs for drawing up plans for the hospital addition might be taken from the pool of donated funds.

More than $400,000 was generated in a local fundraising drive for an expansion of the Haliburton Hospital. However, the proposed 18-bed chronic care addition was shelved by the Ministry of Health until a long-term health care study can be completed.

The ministry promised to pay two thirds of the construction costs, but when the plans were finalized Health Minister Elinor Caplan called for a new study and a new approach to health care.

Prior to the ministry's call for a new study, though, the hospital board ran up a bill of $326,000 in architect fees. The ministry has paid for two thirds of that amount, but St. Joseph's Hospital must come up with the rest. (The Haliburton Hospital is owned by St. Joseph's)

"The Ministry of Health has provided funding for two thirds of the professional fees including architect fees," Eakins said. The hospital is responsible for coming up with the remaining third and must find a way to do so—other than drawing from the donations. He said it is vital that the hospital expansion is kept intact to cover the community's share of the eventual construction costs.

Doctors from the Haliburton Family Medical Centre are also dismayed that the hospital board might consider using the donation to pay architects fees. The seven doctors expressed their opposition to this suggestion in a letter to Frank Lussing, the administrator of St. Joseph's Hospital.

Dysart struggles to keep lid on taxes

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Delivering a municipal budget with only a nine per cent increase in taxes will prove to be a daunting task for Dysart et al councillors.

Although the final budget is being set this week, council considered a preliminary budget at last Monday's meeting.

The draft budget, prepared by Reeve Bill Davis and clerk Donna McCallum, was designed with the intention of holding the increase in municipal property taxes to nine per cent.

"It's tough to do," admitted Davis. "It's like trying to do $1 million worth of work with $500,000."

The cost of general government is expected to jump the most with an increase of 59 per cent over the amount spent last year. Included in this increase is a 14 per cent hike in the amount of money paid to councillors.

Last year council received a total of $32,750, although the budget allowed for $44,000. This year's preliminary budget allows for total remuneration of $50,000.

On Friday, Davis told The Times that the increase in the amount paid to councillors is due to the fact that council has not had a pay increase in the last four years. The increase amounts to an annual increase of $1,000 for each of the council members plus covers unknown items like travel expenses, says Davis.

Other municipal departments are slated for increases ranging from eight per cent for recreation and cultural services to 20 per cent for planning and development.

There are also projected increases in all areas on the revenue side of the township's finances.

Throughout the discussion of the preliminary budget, councillor Murray Fearrey called attention to items he felt had not adequately been dealt with.

One of the areas that concerns Fearrey is the fact that tax arrears in the township are down over last year, so the money collected in penalties and interest will be reduced. Unless this reduction is accounted for in the budget, Fearrey said there will be a short-fall in projected revenue.

Fearrey also noted a 20 per cent increase in the annual cost of operating the municipal sewage treatment plant. "It's not staying close to five per cent is it?" asked Fearrey.

Davis said the idea of the preliminary budget is to give council an idea of what kind of figures they should be looking at and to catch the errors and omissions.

As part of the budget, council is planning for several expenditures in the township this year including, improvements and repairs to the arena, a study of Glebe Park, new street and traffic lights and an increase in the cost of

Snowdon by-law governs hobby farms

Hobby Farmers in Snowdon Township will soon have to adhere to by-law regulations that dictate how many animals they can house on their property.

Council is in the process of drawing up a new by-law that put a lid on the number of 'animal units' that will be allowed on small acreages.

And although most agreed at last Monday's meeting that the by-law is a good idea, there were some objections to the numbers that constitute an animal unit.

The draft by-law introduced at the meeting defines an animal unit as one horse with foal, a cow with calf, one bull, a steer, four goats, four sheep, five rabbits, five chickens or five mink.

The by-law will permit one animal unit per acre on properties ranging in size from five to 50 acres.

The definition of an animal unit was derived from Ministry of Agriculture and Food guidelines. While there were no objections to the criteria for large animals, some people were concerned about the limits for rabbits and chickens.

A maximum of five rabbits or chickens per acre is too restrictive, some argued. The waste, and resulting smell, created by five rabbits is less than than from one horse or cow.

In light of the concerns, council agreed to postpone passage of the by-law and reconsider the guidelines for small animals.

Deputy Reeve Dwain Wruth who did the research in drafting this by-law explained that some sort of controls will be necessary to protect people with hobby farms and their neighbours. He said there are many residential lots being created in the township and many of these people might object to having a full-scale farm on the five-acre lot next door.

Reeve George Simmons said the by-law is necessary to prevent problems in the future. He said there have been no complaints yet, "but when it becomes a problem it's too late."

In addition to limiting the number of livestock allowed on a property, the by-law also sets out rules for the location of barns and manure piles. These must be at least 300 feet from any building, 150 feet from a road and 100 feet from lot lines. Residents must also own at least five acres to put up a barn or keep livestock.

Like the township's new property standards by-law, this by-law will only be enforced if the municipality receives a written complaint from a neighbour.

Fire brigade raising money for jaws

The Stanhope Fire Department has launched a campaign to raise enough money to buy their own 'Jaws of Life.'

Council learned of this initiative at its meeting Wednesday, and two council members have already offered their own support.

"I'd like to see 100 community-minded people of Stanhope make a donation of $100 each," said Reeve Harry Davis. Councillor Fred Gardiner responded that only 99 are needed because he would be the first to contribute. Davis, however, argued that he would be the first and only 98 more contributions would be needed.

The department would have to raise about $12,000 for the purchase of this equipment, which is used to free victims who are trapped in their vehicles after an accident. One set of this hydraulic equipment is already available to the fire departments in the county and is kept at the station in Haliburton.

Township Administrator Gerald Bain noted that some funding for the purchase of this equipment might be available through the Ontario Fire Marshal's Joint Emergency Preparedness (JEP) program.

This little girl was stirring up a brew of fun on April 7 following the Sweep Into Spring bonspiel at the Minden Curling Club. Ann Lee was among the many costumed curlers to take part in the entertainment. Although this was the final 'spiel of the season at the Minden club, there are still a few activities on the go. The annual general meeting will be held this Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. and the awards banquet is scheduled for April 28.

Woman attacked on way to work

An employee of Hyland Crest had to fight off an assailant on April 6 while on her way into work for the night shift.

Police are still investigating the attempted assault which happened in the parking lot of the senior citizens home in Minden.

A female employee was going into work shortly before 11 p.m. when she was attacked from behind and knocked to the ground. She managed to get away from the attacker and make her way into the home.

Police report the woman was not injured in the attack. Officers with the Minden OPP are continuing to investigate the incident.

Snowmobiling

The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association is upset—and rightly so—that county council has disregarded their request for funding in its new budget.

Last year the County donated $3,000 to the HCSA and another $1,000 to the Paudash Trailblazers and the Tall Pines association but this year a donation has been viewed as a luxury the county can't afford.

HCSA vice president Brian Watts says he can hardly believe that this has happened. Because of the shortage snow it was a poor season for snowmobiling, making the matters all the worse. The club operates on a volunteer basis and relies on donations to keep afloat.

The irony of this story is that while the county refused to budget any money for the snowmobile clubs, it has allocated funds for the hiring of a planner/economic development officer. Watts says snowmobiling injects more than $10 million into the local economy each winter.

Apparently, the county's management committee has agreed to meet with the HCSA in the near future. Let's hope this situation can be ironed out.

Jaws of Life

The Stanhope Fire Department has launched a campaign to raise enough to purchase another set of the 'Jaws of Life' and this effort deserves our support.

Only one set of this hydraulic extrication equipment exists in the county and it is stored at a central location in the Haliburton Fire Department. While this equipment is available to serve all parts of the county, a second set would vastly improve firefighters' ability to respond quickly when this life-saving equipment is needed.

This equipment is usually called for in emergency situations and that means response time is important. If the Stanhope department succeeds in getting this equipment it will be able to provide a quicker response to accidents along Highway 35 and throughout the surrounding area.

Innovation puts pets onto the battlefield

I've been reading a book called The Eco Wars by a Canadian writer, David Day. Mostly, the book describes the stupid things we've done to tear up Terra Firma—deforestation, desertification, nuclear proliferation and like that. But there's one chapter devoted to what may be mankind's favourite pastime—war. And more particularly, our efforts to get animals to fight our wars for us.

Consider the humble pigeon. A self-effacing bird whose idea of a good time is a few kernels of corn and the opportunity to carpet bomb a bronze statue or two. Little enough to ask of life. We repay them with a good neighbour policy that approaches genocide. Did you know that 20,000 homing pigeons were killed during World Wars One and Two? And not in the name of drumsticks, either. Those birds were acting as couriers for the Allied Forces—beating their little wings off, dodging flak and shrapnel and snipers' bullets to carry messages wrapped around their legs from one military

by Arthur Black

command post to another.

The homing pigeons tragic flaw was being too good at its job. Military boffins were so impressed by the pigeon's willingness to put its tail feathers on the line that they investigated the military potential of larger flying suicide squads. Crows, ducks, geese—even turkey vultures were sent to boot camp to imbibe the rudiments of the courier business.

Actually, the jumbo avians were fairly quick learners, but the idea of using bigger birds for battle communications never really caught on.

Somehow the image of battle plans flying clutched in the talons of a vulture failed to captivate the military mind...

Fortunately, the fumbled torch of a Feathered Forces concept was snatched by Doctor Louis Feiser. Dr. Feiser is destined to live forever in the annals of military obscenity as the inventor of napalm, but that wasn't his only contribution. He also gave us the Bat Bomb. In theory, it worked like this: Doctor Feiser and a crack squadron of medical seamstresses suture incendiary devices (i.e. tiny bombs) to the furry chests of a whole bunch of bats. Said bats are then dropped from an airplane over an enemy city. They flutter down and seek out attics, eaves and other dark, combustible crannies where they hang out for the night. But first, being fastidious, they gnaw the sutures of their body packs. This activates a delayed-action fuse and poof! Suddenly an enemy city has hundred, perhaps thousands of fires to contend with.

That was the theory. What happened was the

We're all responsible

Reflections

by Dr. David Suzuki

Just over 20 years ago, the startling images sent back to us by astronauts on their way to the moon captured the beauty of planet Earth in space.

For many of us, those dramatic pictures changed our perspective forever because we could see the unity of the air, water and continents. Human political boundaries become meaningless in the context of the physical realities of the earth.

During the '60s and '70s, there had been a strong environmental movement motivated primarily by local issues of the health and aesthetics of pollution. But in the '80s we became aware of the global dimensions of ecological collapse. The new perspective is expressed in the simple but profound slogan "Think globally and act locally."

When asked who is responsible for the environment, respondents in polls answer "we all are." They don't single out individuals. It's the sum of our

Easter manages to evade commercialism

First, a note of thanks to all those who contributed to and participated in the Community Enrichment Forum. The degree of co-operation and goodwill shown has been a real encouragement to those of us who planned it. We are quite certain that more events like this will be planned.

By the time this hits the stands, Easter will have passed. Will it have meant anything? Does it mean anything? It is one of those strange events in the calendar year that no matter how much secular commercialism tries to take over, it doesn't quite succeed in the same way it has with Christmas.

Maybe it is easier to sell something that has to do with the birth of a child than it is to sell something that has to do with someone rising from death.

At the very least, it is easier to prove a birth than a resurrection. It is much easier still to prove a death

Directions

by Edward Moll

than a resurrection. And this season of Easter is still with us and I am not all that certain if we know what to do with it, or for that matter, what it has to do with us.

You see, Easter is embarrassingly Christian. If you were to line up similarities between the religions of the world, they would fall into categories of fair treatment of all, tolerance, concern for the poor, etc. However, if you were to ask, "What makes Christianity distinct from the rest?" the answer would have to rest on that very first announcement that the disciples make to each other, and then to the rest of the world.

"Jesus, the Crucified One is Risen from the Dead."

People have, through the centuries, explored, expounded upon, interpreted, re-interpreted, misinterpreted, never quite fully understood that announcement.

Yet those who have made the choice to believe it have found their hearts strangely warmed, their lives profoundly changed, their world given new meaning. It has meant a new life for them, a life that was no longer shackled by the fear of death, a life freed for service, a life in a new relationship with God and with their husbands and wives and children and friends.

Now that is Easter. Are you embarrassingly Christian?

Great moments in animal warfare

bats got impatient and gnawed their sutures well ahead of schedule, burning down a $2 million US aircraft hangar.

But Great Moments in Animal Warfare don't play national favourites. The Russians tried strapping grenades to dogs trained to run under tanks. When an antenna on the dogs back touched the underside of the tank...KA-BLAM! No more tank. (Or dog.) Alas, the Russkies forgot to teach the dogs how to read. As often as not the tanks they chose to belly under had a hammer and a sickle on the side.

Then there were the Killer Dolphins, trained by U.S. Forces in Vietnam to hunt underwater saboteurs and jab them with large hypodermic needles strapped to their beaks. Did that work? Well, sort of. An unofficial count has it that approximately 60 South Vietnamese (Guilty? Innocent? Only Neptune knows) were assassinated by armed dolphins, along with two drunken American soldiers who went for an unauthorized swim in classified waters. And who can forget the Kamikaze Cat? Back in the 40's, British Intelligence tried dropping cats attached to bombs on enemy ships at sea. The theory was that a cat's hatred of water would make it steer the bomb toward the target ship. Didn't work too well. Cats slung out of speeding airplanes several thousands feet in the air lack the detachment necessary to guide missiles reliably.

"Animals" wrote George Eliot, "are such agreeable friends—they ask no question; they pass no criticisms."

George was right—and more's the pity. Animals would fare a lot better in this world if they possessed the capacity to ask a few pertinent questions or tear a strip off their human handlers once in a while.

New Snowdon councillor

Snowdon Councillor Mike Carpenter.

Mike Carpenter was sworn in as a Snowdon Township Councillor at last Monday's meeting, filling the vacancy created by the death of Councillor Jack Hills.

Carpenter was a candidate in the last municipal elections. Although he received strong support with 210 votes, his election bid was unsuccessful.

Carpenter was welcomed to council Monday by Reeve George Simmons, who expressed confidence in his ability and said the new councillor will be a "great asset." Simmons said there are many "hot issues" that council will be addressing in the next few months that Carpenter will be involved with.

Stanhope closes info booth, considers a second option

The tourist information booth in Carnarvon will not be opening this summer, but an alternate service is being considered by Stanhope Township Council.

The benefits don't justify the cost of operating the information booth located beside Carnarvon Lumber, council concluded at its meeting Wednesday. Therefore, they passed a resolution to shut it down.

However, the Scenic Highway 35 Association has come up with a proposal to erect an outdoor kiosk at the corner of Highways 35 and 118, where literature can be displayed. Association members Joachim Matysek and Gary Grosschadle asked council for funding to build the kiosk.

The kiosk would be open year round and wouldn't require any staffing, they told council. The only cost involved would be the initial outlay of about $3,500 for its construction.

Last year the municipality spent $2,700 to keep the old tourist information booth open. Only 800 people visited the booth all summer. That works out to a cost of $3.38 for every person who visited the booth last year, said Administrator Gerald Bain. On average, he said, 12 people visited the booth each day and it's possible that five or six of those people all came in one car.

Although councillors were receptive to the Association's idea for an unmanned kiosk, Reeve Harry Davis hinted that money might not be available for it this year. The township is having a new municipal office built this spring and Davis said finances are "tight right now."

Since the kiosk will actually be located in Minden Township, Davis suggested that Minden Council should be approached for funding. Matysek, however, noted that the kiosk will primarily be of benefit to businesses in Stanhope Township.

It was also noted that the information booth that had been supported by Stanhope is also in Minden Township.

Because council is in the process of drafting its new budget, it was not prepared to make any financial commitment at Wednesday's meeting. Davis said the request will be discussed at the next budget committee meeting.

Neighbours square off in roads dispute

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Two Minden Lake neighbours have been given until April 26 to iron out their differences over paying for the maintenance of Burch Drive.

Estella Burch and Stephen Dawson both appeared before council last Thursday and were involved in a dispute over the proposed rezoning of Dawson's property.

Dawson has applied to sever his Minden Lake property into four lots, but requires a rezoning from rural to residential limited services in order to do so.

The property Dawson is rezoning is one of five that Burch developed as a plan of subdivision. The lots are accessed by Burch Drive, a municipally owned road that the township has not assumed into its road system.

The costs of maintaining the road are shared equally by the five property owners on the road, including Burch and Dawson.

However Dawson's proposed severance will create three additional lots with access to the road, and in trying to reach an agreement over payment for road maintenance from these new lots, Dawson and Burch ran into difficulty.

Burch told council that she intends to object to the rezoning unless there is a guarantee that access to the lots is by water only and not from Burch Drive.

She said she had tried "very hard" to come to an agreement over road maintenance costs with Dawson.

After the public meeting on Dawson's rezoning, Burch said she approached Dawson and requested some sort of written guarantee that each of the new lots would pay a share of the road costs.

Dawson agreed and supplied a letter stating he would be responsible for three-eighths of the costs, instead of the one-fifth he is now paying.

However Burch's lawyer advised her that Dawson's promise was not legally binding and suggested a more formal agreement be drawn up.

Dawson then agreed that he would sign such an agreement if Burch had her lawyer draw one up.

Burch told council that she had the agreement drawn up, but that Dawson hadn't signed it. On this basis, she said she would object to having Dawson's property rezoned which would allow the severances to proceed.

Reeve Ray Moore told Burch that the disagreement over the road was a legal matter to be settled between herself and Dawson. But he said that if Burch wanted to object to the rezoning and force an Ontario Municipal Board hearing, that is her right.

Burch said that she is only responsible for the road on the basis of five lots having access. With the creation of the additional lots, she said she would no longer consider the road her responsibility. "I'll be happy to lose responsibility for Burch Drive," she said.

When it came time for Dawson to present his side of the story, he told council he has every intention of paying his share of the costs once the new lots are created. "I don't feel I've caused a hassle," said Dawson.

He said he wrote the initial letter outlining his intention of paying three-eighths of the cost to Burch's specifications. Then, after Burch told him the first agreement was invalid, Dawson said she presented a second agreement on the night of April 10 and insisted he sign it on the spot.

Dawson said he asked Burch for time to show the agreement to his lawyer, but she insisted that he sign it, "now or never."

Dawson presented copies of the second agreement, drawn up by Burch's lawyer, to council and said he would be willing to sign it right there.

But Burch said the agreement wasn't a complete document because it didn't include a description of the deed to Dawson's property. She also said she spent a month trying to reach an agreement with Dawson and was "left hanging until the final moment."

Moore suggested that council could proceed with the rezoning by-law which would give Dawson and Burch 20 days to reach an agreement. Since Dawson said he would sign the document supplied by Burch, Moore said the two people are very close to settling their differences.

Instead of passing the by-law, council gave it two of the necessary three readings and said they would delay final passage until the next council meeting on April 26 to give Burch and Dawson two weeks to come to terms.

Individual efforts destined to fail unless political will is gained personal demands and behavior that is depleting the planet of its natural wealth and poisoning it with toxic debris.

Individual efforts to reduce garbage or cut back on the use of cars, are expressions of the recognition that global responsibility begins with personal action. But without a similar commitment by politicians and industrial leaders, it won't be enough.

All of the first ministers and most business leaders claim that the environment is now one of their highest priorities. So objectives and programs should be integrated within an ecological framework. That means we have to abandon projects that will only continue or exacerbate global degradation.

That includes developments like the Hibernia oil megaproject in Newfoundland, low level NATO training flights over Labrador, new coal burning plants in Nova Scotia, the second phase of the James Bay energy project in Quebec, logging the Temagami forest and building the construction of the Rafferty and Alameda dams in Saskatchewan, building the dam on the Oldman River and pulp mills in Alberta, logging the Stein and Carmanah Valleys in B.C.

In each case, government officials and business leaders respond similarly—critics should mind their own business, outsiders have no right to poke their noses in local affairs and priorities of jobs and profit must override environmental objections.

Industrial leaders live in a world in which growth and a profit dictate their actions and that's why we desperately need a new ecological economics. But political leaders have no excuse for their failure to understand what thinking globally and acting locally means.

Federal Energy Minister Jake Epp showed his environmental insensitivity when he announced that when it's a question of profit, jobs and the environment, jobs and profit have to come first. The most ludicrous example of environmental blindness was the local politician and supporter of the Point Aconi coal plant in Cape Breton who said "We need jobs and money. We'll take the pollution."

We may generate pollution locally, but it doesn't remain conveniently in the area where it was made. Canadians have been trying to tell Americans for decades about the impact of their acid rain on our forests and lakes. We were also on the receiving end of fallout of radioisotopes released by the fire at the Chernobyl nuclear plant. We would never have accepted a Soviet reply that said "The Chernobyl plant is our business. We need the jobs and the technology in Ukraine. We'll live with the radiation."

Our lavish lifestyle in the industrialized countries who only represent 20 per cent of all people on earth means that we consume the vast bulk of the planet's resources while generating most of the toxic pollutants that are injected into the global commons.

Less than 0.5 per cent of all people on earth are Canadians yet we contribute two per cent of the atmospheric carbon dioxide that is contributing to global warming.

If, as the 1988 Toronto Conference on the Atmosphere concluded, the potential impact of global warming is "second only to nuclear war," can we continue to support local political and economic initiatives that end up contributing disproportionately to global warming, for example?

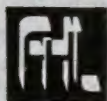

The phrase "think globally and act locally" slips easily from our mouths but is a lot harder to live by.

Sponsors are sought for housing project

Municipalities recognize the need but don't respond to request for help

The search for a sponsor to apply for funding for affordable, non-profit housing in Haliburton County has not yet turned up any takers at the municipal level.

The now-defunct Haliburton County Social Action Committee has sent out letters to all municipalities in the county, hoping to find people interested in following through on the recommendations of the Municipal Housing Statement. Their letter was brought to the attention of Minden, Dysart and Stanhope councils last week, but none expressed an interest in tackling this project.

At last Wednesday's meeting in Stanhope, councillors agreed there is a need for affordable housing in the county, but some were pessimistic that funding will be available for its creation.

Reeve Harry Davis said he sees two problems: one is finding a sponsor and the other is getting provincial support. "I don't think the Ontario Government will come through with the funding when it comes right down to the crunch," said Davis.

Davis referred to a previous statement he said was made by provincial finance minister Robert Nixon. According to Davis, Nixon said he would like to eliminate the province's spending on social welfare and assisted housing.

The Municipal Housing Statement recently identified the need for at least 54 units of assisted housing in the county.

The Housing Statement was prepared under the guidance of the Social Action Committee.

The letter was on the list of correspondence at last Thursday's council meeting in Minden but there was no discussion on the matter.

It was briefly addressed by Dysart Council at its meeting Monday. Dysart is already jointly involved with the Haliburton Legion in a project to establish seniors housing in the village. The Social Action Committee has been made aware of Dysart's involvement in this project.

The Social Action Committee was co-chaired by George Davidson and Jude King, who are now contacting groups and individuals that might be interested in carrying on with the work. The committee's letter has been circulated to all municipalities in the county.

Gary McKnight, the county's Chief Administrative Officer, also presented the findings and recommendations of the Housing Statement to the steering committee studying the county's long-term health and housing needs last week.

The letter being circulated by Davidson and King says a "significant number of householders still experience real problems in obtaining suitable and/or affordable housing. Most require rental accommodation.

"The Social Action Committee is looking for one or more community sponsors to accept the challenge of being part of a housing solution," the letter says.

The Ontario Ministry of Housing has a non-profit housing program that allows non-community groups the opportunity to meet the needs of local residents. The program pays for the costs of development and ongoing support so that sponsoring groups do not have to make any financial contribution.

The letter also notes that an Access to Permanent Housing Committee is being formed to promote the development of quality and affordable housing in the county.

Minor baseball registration tops expectations with 250

Minor baseball registration surpassed all expectations last week with close to 250 kids signing up to play in the newly-formed Minden league.

Registration was held at Archie Stouffer Elementary School last Wednesday and Thursday and organizers were overwhelmed by the response. About 130 kids signed up on the first night and another 120 registered on Thursday.

Over the next few weeks the Minden Baseball Association will be putting the teams together and making up the schedules. Once this has been accomplished, all the players will be contacted by their coaches.

This is the first time minor baseball has been offered in Minden and the association is looking forward to a very good season. The younger players will start off playing T-ball and advance to softball in later years.

Organizers will soon be looking for team sponsors to provide equipment and uniforms in time for the start of the season.

Many parents have offered to help with coaching, scorekeeping and umpiring and a special 'grass roots' clinic will be offered in May to help them prepare for these roles.

In addition to the minor baseball, a slow pitch league is being organized again this summer for older ball players. Anyone interested in playing in this league can register by calling Kim Collis (286-3492), Mark Thompson (286-4445) or Russ Duhaime (286-4255).

This military 'Buffalo' touched down last Wednesday morning. With a wingspan of 96 feet, this is the largest plane to land on the newly paved runway.

Bright future for airport

The Haliburton Highlands (Stanhope) Airport's reputation is starting to climb as more and more pilots from across the province become aware of the recently upgraded facilities that are now available.

There are plenty of great little airports in Canada, but you've seen the Stanhope Airport from the air you don't realize just how good it is, says Airport Manager Mike Carey.

"It's not only great, it's impressive," says Carey, who was hired by the township six months ago. "I for one have seen the Stanhope Airport at 3,000 feet and it was then I realized this airport does not only lie in the Highlands, it's very much on top."

With help from the federal and provincial governments, Stanhope Township took on the project of upgrading the facility last spring. The airport was closed throughout much of last summer while work was in progress. The 2,500 foot runway was realigned and paved. Lighting was installed and the terminal building is being renovated.

The improvements are now beginning to pay off. Pilots are becoming aware of what the airport is capable of handling and the level of traffic is gradually increasing.

"Stanhope Airport is a very unique and beautiful little airport that is attracting the attention of many people," says Carey. "Having an airport with such a reputable image reflects well on this area as a whole. This is the kind of airport this community needs."

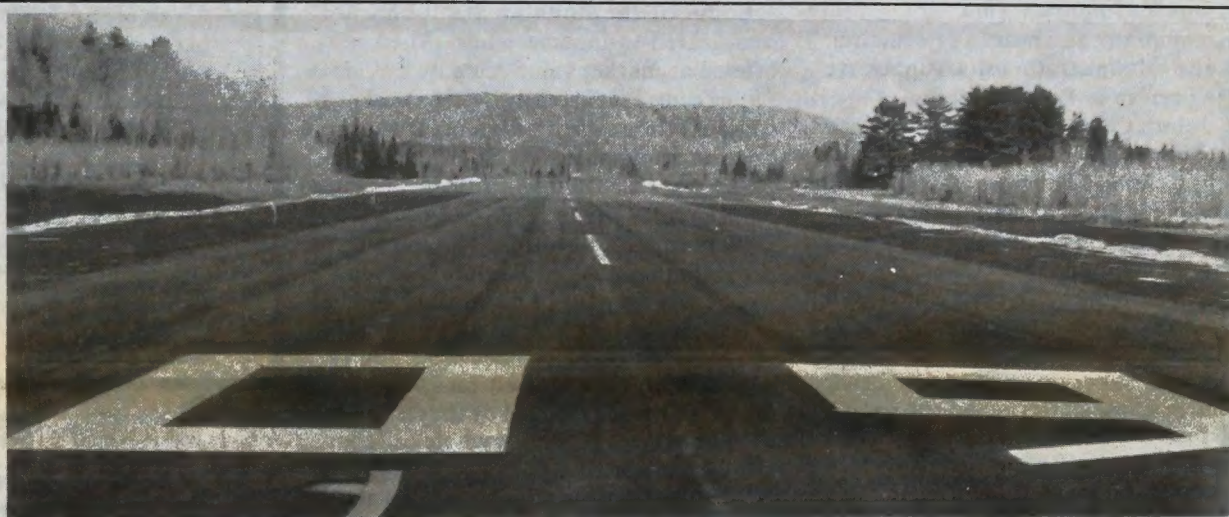

The new runway is capable of handling virtually all single-engine planes and most twin engines, says Carey. Last Wednesday morning a huge military 'Buffalo' landed on the airstrip. With a length of 79 feet and a wing span of 96 feet, this military transport is the largest plane he has seen so far at the airport.

Now the improvements are almost completed, the municipality and the airport committee are looking at different ways of expanding the hangar facilities. There are 11 hangars now, but are all full and Carey says a lot of pilots are expressing an interest in the airport.

While pilots are obviously pleased with the improvements, some area residents were bothered by the new lighting. This problem, however, has now been minimized with the installation of an ARCAL lighting system, which allows pilots to activate the runway lights with their radios. The lights are now being turned off at night and pilots can activate them by pressing their radio microphone five times in five seconds. The lights will then stay on for 15 minutes.

"I'm really excited with the growing enthusiasm shown by many people over this long-awaited development of the airport," he said. "Since the start of the new year I have noticed a gradual increase in aircraft and can predict a very busy summer ahead of me."

Although it is commonly referred to as the Stanhope Airport, this facility serves the entire county. "Stanhope Airport is ideal for this community and I hope the entire county is as proud of it as I am," says Carey.

With help from the federal and provincial governments, the Stanhope airport underwent major renovations last year. The project included the paving of the runway and installation of lights. The runway was also slightly realigned. The '09' tells pilots that the runway runs due east/west.

Interest in the upgraded Stanhope Airport is soaring and Mike Carey is looking forward to a very busy summer. I'm really excited about the growing enthusiasm says the airport manager.

Airport Manager Mike Carey is excited about the growing interest in the airport. Although he doesn't have a plane of his own, he hopes to eventually buy one. In the mean time he'll have to settle for this miniature version, which was a gift from his landlord, Betty Dionne.

Committee hears housing options

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The committee studying Haliburton County's long-term health, social services and housing needs was presented with some options for providing low-cost accommodation in the area at last week's meeting.

In a meeting dedicated almost entirely to the topic of housing, the committee heard presentations from James Douglas and David Howe, both from the Ministry of Housing, about some of the non-profit housing programs that are available.

Committee chairman Maureen Dikun said that Howe and Douglas explained the different kinds of non-profit housing programs that are offered by the ministry and the groups which are eligible for financial assistance in trying to get programs started.

Haliburton County's chief administrative officer, Gary McKnight, presented the recently completed municipal housing statement which deals with the housing situation in the county and offers recommendations for improvements.

The committee also heard a presentation from the administrator of a supportive housing centre in Peterborough.

St. John's Centre offers self-contained apartments for senior citizens and people with disabilities. The centre allows people to retain an independent lifestyle but offers medical and social support services for those who need them.

The centre has 102 self-contained apartments, but has a common dining room where residents can take their meals and 24-hour supervision. There is also a staff nurse whose duties include operating blood pressure clinics and similar services.

The centre itself does not provide a whole range of health services, but has a health coordinator who provides a link with home care and palliative care providers.

The goal of St. John's is to "allow residents to maintain independence as long as possible by providing them with support services," says health analyst Anne Gallant.

The centre also rents office space in the complex to health and social service related agencies, like Hospice, community care and a senior's information centre.

The centre is not an institution, but "provides institutional features in an unobtrusive way," says Gallant.

In the two-and-a-half years the centre has been in operation, only two of the residents have had to leave their apartments because they developed cognitive impairments and had to move into nursing homes.

The average age of residents at St. John's is 81-years-old which is quite high compared to standard senior's housing units, says Gallant.

The success of the centre has resulted in a waiting list of about 235 people wanting to move in.

Some of the units at St. John's are rent-geared-to-income while others are offered at market value rents.

The centre is currently doing a study to compare the costs of providing accommodation and services at St. John's compared to the costs of institutional care. Although the study is not yet complete, Gallant says the unofficial opinion is that providing housing at St. John's is much less expensive than in institutions.

But the real difference between supportive housing centres, such as St. John's, and nursing or senior citizens homes is the quality of life enjoyed by the residents.

"The centres provide a whole different kind of accommodation," says Gallant. "Instead of sharing units, people have their own rooms and are able to do things for themselves."

Although there are dining facilities at St. John's, each apartment also has its own kitchen for people who prefer to cook for themselves.

Besides the presentations on housing, the health study committee also discussed some of their future activities.

Gallant says the committee is proceeding with the plan to break into focus groups to address specific issues related to the study.

Consultant Claude Holpin has been taken on to develop the focus groups and to facilitate the meetings. Holpin is the consultant who carried out the operational review of the Hyland Crest Senior Citizen's Home in Minden.

The committee is also planning to undertake a bed accommodation survey of the county. The one day census will provide the number of people receiving care while in hospitals, institutions, and in their own homes in the county.

The survey will also account for those people receiving treatment in beds outside the county, and those who are waiting for spaces to become available.

"It will be a snapshot view of resources and the need for those resources," says Gallant. The survey will assess if the current placement situation is appropriate. It is hoped the bed accommodation survey can be completed by May 24.

The committee's next meeting will be on May 1, at the Haliburton Hospital.

Rifts emerge in delegate selection

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The selection of local delegates to the Liberal's June leadership convention could well turn into a war of opposing slates of candidates, says the association's president.

Warren Rahn, president of the Victoria-Haliburton Federal Liberal Riding Association, says a group of anti-abortion activists are expected to support a pre-determined slate of candidates at tomorrow's (Tuesday) selection meeting.

The anti-abortionists, calling themselves Liberals for Life, have bought large blocks of memberships to the Liberal Party in an attempt to influence the outcome of the leadership convention on June 23.

Rahn says the Liberals for Life brought in two large blocks of memberships totalling 150 and that there may be more who have joined in "drips and drabs."

And although the association has 567 members going into tomorrow's meeting, Rahn says the outcome will depend on the number of people who actually show up to vote.

In the Peterborough riding, the Liberals for Life controlled 50 per cent of the memberships at the time of the delegate selection meeting. But because only 40 per cent of "legitimate Liberals" showed up for the vote, compared to 90 per cent of the Liberals for Life, Rahn says the association was "beat badly" in the selection process by the anti-abortionists.

Although delegates are supposed to be nominated from the floor and chosen in an open vote, Rahn says the Peterborough Liberals for Life had pre-selected a slate of candidates which were then elected en masse by the anti-abortionists.

Rahn says he assumes the Victoria-Haliburton Liberals for Life will attempt a similar strategy. Although he would like to see an open election, Rahn says it is probable that the legitimate Liberal members will present their own slate of candidates to oppose the Liberals for Life.

"It's an unfortunate situation," says Rahn. "It stifles the democratic process."

It's not a question of pro-life versus pro-choice, says Rahn. He says the association is upset that a special interest group is attempting to replace dedicated Liberals with one-issue delegates who have no previous commitment to the party.

The Liberals for Life have even alienated those members of the association who are against abortion. Rahn says many association members will vote against the Liberals for Life slate, even though they share the same pro-life beliefs.

Usually only about 50 or 60 association members would turn out for a delegate selection meeting, but Rahn says he expects to see 200 people or more at tomorrow's meeting.

And with the Liberals for Life holding at least 150 memberships, Rahn describes the association's position as "precarious."

"The hostile take-over could take place if not all the legitimate members show up," he says.

Every federal riding in the country is sending 12 delegates to the leadership convention in June. In most cases supporters of the individual leadership candidates have been canvassing the ridings soliciting support.

But the attempted take-over by the Liberals for Life has overshadowed that process, says Rahn. Although there have been organizers from the various leadership camps in the area, Rahn says their effort has been spent trying to fight the single-issue Liberals for Life.

"They've basically been pitching in to help get new memberships and ensure a good turnout at the meeting," says Rahn. "There's been no time to look at the important issues."

The Liberals for Life are throwing their support behind leadership hopeful Tom Wappel, an MP from the Toronto area who's taken a strong stand against abortion as one of the main platforms in his campaign. Aside from the pro-life movement, Wappel has little support and is not considered to be a threat to front-runners Jean Cretien, Paul Martin Jr., or Sheila Copps.

Among the legitimate members of the Victoria-Haliburton association, Rahn says there appears to be significant support for Cretien in the riding and also some support for Copps. He says these impressions are mostly speculation and not meant to be predictions.

Cretien is the one leadership candidate who opposes the Meech Lake Accord.

Both Martin and Copps have been to Lindsay to meet with members of the local association. Rahn says there may be a chance that Cretien will also make an appearance although it will be after the delegates have been chosen.

Rahn says support for leadership candidates, and their platforms, will take a back seat to the fight between the Liberals for Life and legitimate members to control the delegate selection process.

It's now a game of numbers, which ever team can field the most players will win.

Birthday Bash

Members of the Haliburton Figure Skating Club held a birthday celebration at the Dysart Arena on April 8 when they presented their annual skating show. It was standing room only as the performers, young and old, delighted the audience with their poise and grace. Included in the highlights of the show was a performance by some of the club's alumni.

MEECH WILL

The constitutional accord could alter the workings of the Senate

Marjorie Bowker's analysis of the Meech Lake Accord and its implications for Canada continues this week with a look at Senate reform, why it will be extremely difficult to change Canada's constitution if the Accord is passed, the unaddressed concern of northern Canada and the entrenchment of an annual first ministers' conference in the constitution.

Nominations to the Senate

The Senate was created in Canada's original constitution, the B.N.A. Act of 1867. It now has 104 members, with seats distributed as follows:

Quebec 24; Ontario 24

Maritime Provinces 24 (10 for Nova Scotia; 10 for New Brunswick; 4 for P.E.I.);

Western provinces 24 (6 each for Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C.);

Newfoundland 6;

Yukon and Northwest Territories, one each.

Senators have always been appointed solely by the federal cabinet. Mandatory retirement is at age 75. All bills passed by the elected House of Commons are sent on to the Senate for approval before becoming law. In most cases, the Senate approves the bills; sometimes it holds public hearings before approving; it may recommend changes, in which case the bill goes back to the Commons for another vote. The Senate's legislative powers are much the same as those of the House of Commons, except that the Senate cannot initiate money bills. The Senate serves as a kind of final "watch-dog" on legislation, assuring that all interests have been considered. It has acted in this capacity for 120 years.

In recent times there have been pressures to reform the Senate to give the regions a stronger voice in Ottawa. Much of the agitation for change has come from western provinces which feel they are insufficiently represented.

It is important to note that Senate reform was not included in Quebec's original demands. Its inclusion in the Accord was largely at the insistence of the western premiers.

Not everyone agrees on the need for Senate reform. There are those who wish no reform at all; others who are opposed to the Senate's very existence and for that reason will not discuss its possible reform. Though the media and others frequently berate the Senate as a sanctuary for political patronage, a government poll (Decima) in August 1989 found that the average Canadian thinks well of the Senate and of Senators, indicating that there is a body of opinion which is comfortable with the Senate as it is.

What The Meech Lake Accord Does, and What It Fails To Do.

Under the Meech Lake Accord, the federal government would retain the right to appoint Senators. But it would have to make its choice from among "names" submitted by the government of the province where the vacancy occurs. The person chosen must be "acceptable" to the federal government.

The effect of this amendment is to change the procedure for appointment of Senators. Nominees from the provinces are likely to be political favourites (even more so than with nominees to the Supreme Court), creating a kind of a political patronage at the provincial level. However, the implications here would not be as serious as with judicial nominees.

It is not so much what the Meech Lake Accord does in regard to the Senate as to what it fails to do. While changing the method of appointment, it still leaves unchanged such crucial Senate issues as defining its role, function and powers, and assuring that its members are equitably distributed. Changes such as these could be achieved more easily under the present amending formula than will be possible under the Meech Lake Accord which will require unanimous agreement among all the provinces.

Canadians are being told that unless the Meech Lake Accord is approved, Senate reform will be impossible. The truth is that reform will be infinitely more difficult if it is approved because of the unanimity rule which will govern future changes.

The advocates of Senate reform should not have allowed themselves to be deluded into signing the Accord without insisting at least on entrenchment of some basic principle of Senate reform, whether it be the so-called "Triple-E Senate", or some other concept. All they got was the promise of annual conferences with Senate reform "on the agenda". This does not really mean much. To be "included on the agenda" does not ensure that discussion will necessarily follow, certainly not that agreement will be reached. Being included on the agenda could continue indefinitely, without ever producing results.

The Triple-E Senate

This is a concept developed by Alberta Premier Don Getty and approved in principle at a conference of western premiers. The words mean that the reformed Senate must be "elected, equal and effective". Senators would be elected — presumably with an equal number from each province. As to the word "effective", no one has really defined that term. One wonders what further powers are contemplated to make the Senate "effective" beyond those which it already enjoys. As mentioned earlier, its powers are almost equivalent to those of the House of Commons. If two elected bodies — the Senate and the House of Commons — are to exist side by side with roughly parallel powers, it will require a great deal of negotiating to define their separate roles. Even more fundamental than this, however, it could upset our system of "responsible government" under which the cabinet is chosen from the majority party in government. We could be moving in the direction of the American system, which is seen by many as less effective.

The Alberta Senate Election October 1989

Since ratifying the Accord, the Alberta government proceeded in October 1989 to hold an election to fill the one Alberta Senate vacancy, even though there is no constitutional basis to permit such an election. Even if the Meech Lake Accord has been passed (which it had not), there is no provision, even in the Accord, for electing a Senator. Several candidates, representing various political parties and independents entered the race. The successful candidate was a member of one of the province's opposing parties. His name was submitted to the Prime Minister, who declined to make the appointment, saying (quite properly) that even under the Meech Lake Accord, the government is to be furnished with a list of names from which it will appoint a person acceptable to it, not simply a single name, as was attempted here.

The apparent purpose of this election was to promote Senate reform. However there no legal basis anywhere for electing a Senator, with or without the Meech Lake Accord. Simply to elect someone to an unreformed Senate accomplishes nothing; nor does it address the chief complaint, which is regional inequalities. At best, it is a piecemeal attempt at reform and it has no constitutional validity. As at the time of writing (February 1990) Alberta's elected Senator had not received the hoped-for appointment to the Senate.

Conclusion

What the Meech Lake Accord failed to do was include any commitment by the premiers to principles of Senate reform. The folly is that the premiers most bent on Senate reform should have settled for so little in signing the Accord in its present form. It leaves almost no hope, under the Meech Lake unanimity rule, of ever achieving the sweeping reforms they seek.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa has since made it clear that there will be no discussion of Senate reform until the Accord becomes law. The opportunity for addressing this issue may thus have been lost at Meech Lake, and may never emerge again.

THE AMENDING FORMULA

This is a further comment on the rule discussed on Senate Reform.

Every constitution includes a procedure by which it can be amended. As previously explained, the law up to now, in regard to major amendments, has been reasonable—requiring approval by the federal government and by seven provinces representing 50% of Canada's population.

broadens the number of subjects requiring unanimous approval, and effectively gives a veto power to all the provinces (in addition to that of the federal government) over important amendments. In a very real sense, the Meech Lake Accord will "encase our constitution in stone", creating real difficulties in making significant changes in future, especially in regard to Canada's national institutions.

This is why Canadians must be very sure that the Meech Lake Accord is what they want, as it is not likely to be easily changed.

Although Quebec asked for a veto on constitutional amendments, that demand could have been met by giving to Quebecers a veto over constitutional amendments which specifically affect them. But to have given all provinces a general right of veto effectively freezes hope for significant constitutional development in the future.

The unanimity rule will apply not only to Senate reform (as explained above), but it will apply as well to such matters as proportional representation for the provinces in the House of Commons; the Supreme Court of Canada; and the establishment of new provinces. All of these matters under present law (Constitution Act 1982) require approval of only seven provinces—not ten, as under the Accord.

Of all subjects, it is Senate reform and the creation of new provinces which will suffer most under the unanimity rule.

THE CONCERNS OF NORTHERN CANADIANS: THE YUKON AND NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

These two territories have a combined population of 75,000 people (the Northwest Territories with 52,000 of whom 58% are natives; the Yukon with 23,000, 25% being native). The Northwest Territories is the largest political subdivision in Canada, comprising 33% of our nation's total area. Most of Canada's aboriginal people live in these territories.

Because they are "territories" and not "provinces", they are still subject to administration from Ottawa, though over the past decade they have been gradually progressing towards provincial status. Their Executive Councils formerly appointed by Ottawa are now elected, as are the Territorial Assemblies with a Commissioner in each, being the only federally-appointed official. Progress is also being made with the federal government toward settlement of native land claims, and in 1988 with the Northwest Territories reached agreement in principle with Ottawa for increased control over energy resources. It is not surprising then, that there has been a growing movement among Northerners to become designated as provinces within Canada.

However, the Meech Lake Accord will make that very difficult. It will require a constitutional amendment with the unanimous consent of all legislatures and Parliament, any one of which would veto any such proposal. The motivation for exercising such a veto would be the hope of a province laying claim to some of the land area, or more likely to the mineral resources.

In the past, when other provinces were created (such as Alberta, Saskatchewan or Newfoundland) this was done simply by negotiating an Agreement with Ottawa. However, with the provinces becoming part of the process (as they will under Meech Lake), any one province could block the establishment of a new province or provinces in Canada's north.

Creating this barrier to admission of new provinces—as the Meech Lake Accord has done—is a slight to Northern Canada, and to the aboriginals and others who live there.

The following complaints have been voiced by the Territories concerning the Meech Lake Accord:

1. Despite their geographical area, and having the largest native population in Canada, they had no part in the secret negotiations leading up to the Meech Lake Accord in 1987.
2. Because they are not provinces, they will have no right to nominate persons for the Senate.

3. They will not be permitted to furnish nominees for judges of the Supreme Court of Canada.

4. They will have no representative at the annual "Conferences of First Ministers" when Senate reform will be on the agenda.

5. They will have no veto over future constitutional amendments, such as they enjoyed by the provinces.

6. They will have little hope of becoming provinces for the reasons stated above.

As a matter of interest, the Yukon Territorial government in 1988 brought a court action seeking a declaration that (inter alia) the Prime Minister breached a duty of fairness in failing to invite Yukon representatives to attend the Meech Lake meeting or to consult with them before agreeing to any Constitutional Amendments. However, the Court of Appeal of the Yukon Territory held ((1988) 2 W.W.R. 481) that courts of law do not have jurisdiction over the process of legislation.

Suffice to say, the Yukon and Northwest Territories are unique in Canada as being the home of the most of Canada's native Indians, Metis and Inuit, many with a history which pre-dates European colonization. Of all Canadians, theirs might properly be called a "distinct society". In any case, they deserve better consideration than that accorded to them under the Meech Lake Accord.

ENTRENCHMENT OF ANNUAL FIRST MINISTERS' CONFERENCES

The Meech Lake Accord provides for constitutional conferences to be held at least once a year, attended by the ten premiers and the Prime Minister. This was not among Quebec's demands.

The agenda for these meetings must include Senate reform and fisheries, and "such other matters as are agreed upon". These latter words suggest that no other matter will be added unless the premiers agree. Does this mean that the subjects such as aboriginal rights, language or multiculturalism (as examples) might never be included because some premier objects?

"Senate reform" was included at the insistence of Alberta's Premier, Don Getty, and "fisheries" was included at the insistence of the Atlantic provinces—presumably as a condition for their signing the Accord. These items will continue on the agenda for years, possibly forever, as there is no provision for their removal. To require an item to be "included on the agenda" (as the Meech Lake Accord does) is really meaningless. It does not ensure either a meaningful discussion or action. The fact that conferences are convened annually removes any urgency to take any definitive action on these issues.

As to what else the premiers do at these conferences is not clear. Because they are called "constitutional conferences" presumably they will be discussing constitutional amendments.

If this means that the premiers can initiate constitutional changes by meeting annually behind closed doors (as was done at Meech Lake), the procedure (to say the least) is questionable. Are they likely to make commitments (as they did at Meech Lake) without consulting with their cabinets or legislatures, and (more importantly) the public? If so, it would represent a serious erosion of the democratic system.

Thus, these conferences could be either very sterile—by discussing Senate reform and fisheries ad infinitum—or they could become very threatening to the country if they serve to concentrate in the hands of 11 individuals (who happen to be the premiers of the day) control over constitutional amendments without legislative or public consultation. The potential risk here could make this one of the most dangerous provisions in the Meech Lake Accord.

(Next week: The analysis of the Meech Lake Accord continues with an examination of the changes to federal spending powers, cost-sharing programs, the "distinct society" and the French/English language provision.)

'Be smart and do your part'

The following is a sample of some of the letters written by a Grade Seven class at the Archie Stouffer Elementary School about some of the concerns they have regarding the environment. The Times will run more of these thoughtful letters, as space permits, in the next few weeks.

Time for brains

Editor:

I am concerned about our environment pollution rate. Pollution started because of us and now we're responsible for everything on this planet; birds, plants and fish. When you really think about it, we have changed the lives of others as well as us. There's enough room for everyone on this planet. It's time to put all our brainpower to use and not weapons. Our environment is worth more than any coin or artifact in this world. So let's keep it clean.

Sincerely,
Sam Little

World is fading away

Editor:

Guess what? You're polluting the air! Got that? Do you want to die? Well, we are on our way. What is being done about it?

Our world is fading away before our eyes. Why? It's because some adults seem too lazy to take the time or spend the money. What is more important, money or life? Money isn't any good if you're not able to use it.

There are many things we could do to help save OUR environment - our descendants. So they can live a longer, stronger, healthier life!

It is not enough to sit thinking about it, saying to yourself you might do something, some day, sometime, if the time is right. While you're doing that our world is being terminated. Fish are dying in the seas, birds are dying in the trees. Life is precious and you're letting it fade away. Who knows, we might be fried eggs before you think. What good would thinking do if that happened?

Think about the cars going back and forth day after day. Everytime they drive by a tiny portion of your life (world too) is being damaged. At the moment, judging by the way most adults are, this could be the beginning of the end. For every person who tries to help save our environment, life is being saved. Know when to stop. As it's been said before, BE SMART AND DO YOUR PART.

Anna Tomlinson

Editor:

People think that kids shouldn't have a worry in the world. In fact, we all have the biggest worry in the world! I'm referring to pollution, garbage and the ozone layer. People have the knowledge to make different fuels for transportation. They can recycle tires, pop cans and plastic. The big companies have the modern technology to recycle and to do things to stop pollution.

We pollute because some big companies put their products in containers that ruin our world. If they didn't do that then there wouldn't be as much pollution. I'm not blaming all of the big companies.

There are a number of ways we can help. We have to clean up our world now!

In a few years from now, our grandchildren, maybe even our children, won't be able to enjoy a picnic on the beach without wearing face and body protection. Just imagine us in that position. We will be in a few years from now if we keep saying, "we'll clean it up later." You would have wanted your ancestors to pass you down a clean world with drinkable water and breathable air. Keep the world clean so we won't become an endangered species.

immediately convey to the board that this is a totally unacceptable use of the money that we have personally donated," they said. The letter was signed by Doctors Robert Heyes, Dean Stokes, Karl Hartwick, Norman Bottum, Christina Moga, H.E. Good and C.J. Abrahamse.

"Furthermore, we believe we speak for many when we say that the use of this fund for any purpose other than originally intended would be repugnant and wholly against the spirit in which the donations were solicited

"Should the hospital be doomed and never be built, then the only logical and honourable means of dispersing the fund is to return every penny, with interest, to those who donated."

Money from the local fundraising campaign has been put into a trust fund and is collecting interest while the health study is underway. The ministry is paying for any planning costs associated with this study, which is expected to be finalized in a few months.

The ministry's withdrawal of support for the original expansion plan has proven to be a highly emotional issue for many county residents. The idea of using the donations for anything other than what they were intended for further aggrevates the situation.

"The Ontario Government has lied to us and cheated us in this matter," the Haliburton doctors wrote. "We certainly don't expect to be double-crossed by St. Joseph's Hospital too."

Attempts to contact Lusing for comment last week were unsuccessful.

expanding the sewage treatment plant.

Also still to be dealt with are funding requests from the museum, the gallery and the BIA.

They also considered several requests for money that are not included in the preliminary budget from various local organizations.

Given the amount of items yet to be addressed, nine per cent seems to be an optimistic goal to set for a tax increase.

"We can't blame this one on the provincial government," said Fearrey. "This is in our laps."

Council is meeting again tonight (Monday) to iron out details of the final budget. Once the municipal tax increase is set, it will be added to the county levy and board of education levy to determine the total cost to Dysart's ratepayers.

Kim & Jerry dazzle kids

A highly-animated performance from Kim and Jerry Brodey ended the concert season.

Kim and Jerry Brodey dazzled the crowd at the HHSS auditorium April 8 with their music and theatrics, topping off another season for the Haliburton County Children's Concert Series.

Dozens of kids brought their parents to watch, listen and participate in the highly animated performance.

Like most performers in this season's series, Kim and Jerry's style was as entertaining for the adults in the crowd as it was for the children. The duo from Toronto managed to fill the auditorium with smiles and laughter as the children and parents played along with the fun and music. It's no wonder why they are at the forefront of North America's children's artists.

The Sunday afternoon show was the final one for this season. 'Bears, bears, bears' opened the season with a splash in November. The Junior Jug Band brought foot stomping fun in February. And Kim and Jerry closed out the season with the audience begging for more.

And more they will get. Organizers have lined up three talented and popular acts for the 90-91 season. On Nov. 17 Charlotte Diamond, British Columbia's favourite children's performer will open the new series. The Ontario Ballet Theatre will perform their program which has been specially created for children. And on April 21, 1991, Kaleidoscope has been tentatively booked to entertain the audience with folk tales, fables and nursery rhymes.

Tickets for the new season are available by calling Janet (286-1734) or Marilou (457-1889).

Tykes top Haliburton in 6-3 season ender

The Minden Tykes played their last game of the season against the Haliburton Jasco Tykes and came away with a hard-fought 6-3 victory.

Haliburton started the game very strong and were rewarded with the first goal. The goal seemed to wake up the local boys as they scored three straight. Goal scorers were Joshua Shaw assisted by Ryan Lydiatt, Danny Nielson from Joshua Shaw and Rick Kinsman; and Joshua Shaw from Danny Nielson and Adam Bathe.

The play then see-sawed back and forth with goalies Petrow from Haliburton and Greg Kerr from Minden making outstanding saves.

Haliburton pulled out all the stops and were able to score two quick goals. Scorers were Chris Nimigon and Ryan Wood. At this point the Minden boys put it all together in the final half of the third and scored three more goals to salt away the victory. Goals scored by Joshua Shaw from an Nielson and Trevor Wood; and Joshua Shaw from Philip Neville and David Byrnes.

The Minden team played well. Rick Kinsman David Byrnes, Trevor Wood provided a very strong defence, the forwards, Ryan Lydiatt, Philip Neville, Danny Nielson, Adam Bathe and Joshua Shaw put on a great defensive display. Greg Kerr was outstanding in the Minden net, turning back many good Haliburton scoring chances. Most Valuable Player awards went to Joshua Shaw from Minden and Chris Nimigon from Haliburton. The players and coaches thank Larry Cummins of Larry's Video who was the sponsor of the team, the arena staff, Minden Minor Hockey Association and the parents for a great year of hockey. We are looking forward to next year.

Kids and parents joined in the fun of the Children's Concert Series.

MNR Misfits edged in semifinals

The Minden Ministry of Natural Resources hockey team (Minden Misfits) were among 32 teams to participate in the 16th Annual MNR Provincial Hockey Tournament in Sudbury on April 5, 6 & 7.

Minden's first game was late Thursday afternoon against Toronto. Outstanding goaltending by Kevin Smith and goals by Bart Hilhorst (2), Ben Manuge, Brant Jones, and Tim Haxton aided the Misfits to a 5-2 romp over the Toronto team.

Minden's next game was early Friday morning against the newly formed rival, Lindsay Fishhawks. Early season play saw the Misfits and Fishhawks draw to a 2-2 tie their first game, and a Fishhawks' win, 3-2, in overtime in their second game.

With vengeance on their minds, Minden jumped out to an early 2-0 lead with goals by Jones and Hilhorst. However, even impeccable goaltending by Smith, Minden was unable to fend off a late surge in the last two minutes by the Fishhawks, forcing a 2-2 tie.

Kevin Smith was awarded M.V.P. for his efforts.

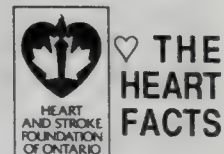

Smith was to be distinguished M.V.P. for the second time after a 1-1 draw with Pembroke. Minden's lone goal scored by Haxton, assisted with a perfect pass from Brendan Berube.

With one win and two ties, Minden qualified for semi-final play in the "C" Championship. Their opposition? Who else but the Lindsay Fishhawks. Great goaltending and a late goal by Jones, assisted by Marcel DeMars, was not enough to quiet a hungry Lindsay team. Minden bowed out with a 3-1 loss.

Smith won his third M.V.P. and Lindsay went on to a 3-0 victory over Chatham in the final game for the Divisional Title.

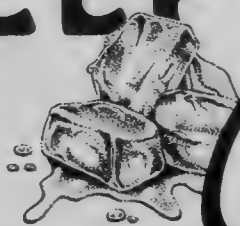

The Minden MNR hockey team put in a strong performance at a provincial tournament in Sudbury but were edged out by their Lindsay rivals. From the left (front row) are Mark Pineau, Bart Hilhorst, Kevin Smith, Brant Jones, Ben Manuge (back) Brenan Berube, Karl Northey, Scott Reed, Marcel Demars, Hardy Kraft and Tim Haxton.

Q. How does what I eat relate to my chances of having a heart attack or stroke?

A. If you eat fatty foods -- such as butter, whole milk, ice cream, cream cheeses -- or use saturated oil in cooking, your body is taking in too much fat. Eating these foods can lead to a build-up of fatty deposits in the arteries of your heart. Clogged arteries are the leading cause of heart attack and stroke.

Council agrees to fix zoning bogie

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden council has agreed to try and get the Blairhampton Golf Course back at par.

Golf course owner Doug Prozak attended last Thursday's meeting to ask council to correct a zoning error on his property.

The error occurred when Minden's new comprehensive zoning by-law 86-26 was drafted. At that time, the Blairhampton golf course was incorrectly zoned as Open Space, instead of the commercial zoning it has under the previous by-law.

Minden's other golf course, the Beaverbrook, was correctly zoned C4, a commercial zone.

"I don't want to get lawyers involved in this," said Prozak. He asked council for a letter stating their commitment to rezone the property to C4. "The way it was, and the same as Beaverbrook," Prozak said. "It's more of a correction than a rezoning."

Reeve Ray Moore said the problem has been discussed at the planning committee and responsibility for the mistake was given to the golf course's previous owner. He said when the new zoning by-law was circulated, the previous owner should have caught the mistake and brought it to the township's attention.

"Council is very sorry, but it's not council's fault," said Moore.

Prozak said he doesn't blame council for the error, he blames Bob Lehman the planner who drafted the new zoning by-law. "The guy had obviously made a mistake. I'm asking you to help," said Prozak.

Prozak said he brought the error to Lehman's attention, and although the planner admitted to Prozak he had made a mistake with the golf course's zoning, Prozak said Lehman had no intention of admitting his mistake to council. "There's no question he admitted he made a mistake," said Prozak.

Moore said Prozak's wasn't the only property to be zoned incorrectly in the new by-law and it's council's intention to correct the mistakes.

Councillor Lewis Stevens said correcting the errors, at no cost to the property owners involved, should be a priority of the township.

Deputy-Reeve Bern Berry said "there has been an error made, but there are errors made in every profession." He said council should assist not only the Blairhampton Golf Course, but all the locations with similar problems.

Berry suggested that council meet with Lehman to address the concerns of incorrectly zoned property in the township. "That's the way it should be handled," he said.

Stevens said he hoped to see the problem resolved quickly. "This gentleman has a huge investment and someone made a mistake," he said.

Councillor Bob Sisson said he had no problem with giving Prozak a letter stating the township's intention to rezone the property to C4.

Berry cautioned council that while they can try and do their best to help Prozak, they are not in a position to guarantee the rezoning.

Moore told Prozak that the improper zoning will not affect the operation of his business, because the golf course is a legal non-conforming use in the present zone.

But Prozak said the zone affects the value of the property and any future development plans he might have for the Golf course.

Council said they would provide Prozak with a letter spelling out their intention to have error corrected and would put the matter before the planning committee for its input.

Council rejects AMO request

Stanhope Township won't be participating in an AMO project designed to embarrass the province into providing more funds to municipalities.

"It's an arena we shouldn't be performing in," councillor Fred Gardener said of the request to insert letters with the local tax bills.

The Association of Municipalities of Ontario (AMO) is asking municipalities to circulate letters to their residents decrying the erosion of provincial support to municipalities. Although some Stanhope councillors agreed with the message of the letter, they don't think it is appropriate for the municipality to circulate them with the tax bills.

Reeve Harry Davis noted that the municipality has close dealings with the province on many projects. He said it might interfere with the level of co-operation between the two levels of government if Stanhope participates in this project.

The letters urge people to write their MPP and the Premier to convey their concerns about the local services they rely on.

"Your local services and programs are in danger," it says is a sample letter from AMO. "Grossly inadequate funding" will mean reduced services and higher municipal taxes, it says. "That's the province's fault."

Davis said that if council wants to send a letter out to Stanhope residents it should be completely reworded. However, other councillors felt there was no need to send such a letter at all.

Kinnettes celebrate 30 years

by Carla Stewart

On March 24, the Kinette Club of Minden celebrated 30 years of service to the community. Acquaintances old and new joined us from all over to help in the celebration.

We were fortunate to have with us, Founder Hal Rogers. Mr. Rogers had the honour of presenting Kinsmen Tom Prentice and Kinsmen Larry Amyotte with life memberships, the highest honour in the Kinsmen Association.

Also on this evening, we presented Kin Tom and Marg Prentice with a silver tray celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary which was April 3.

On April 3, eleven Kinettes travelled to Bobcaygeon, sporting our homemade Easter bonnets, for our visitation with another club. Great time was had by all. A special thank you to Kinette Marg Prentice for the use of their motor home as transportation to and from the meeting.

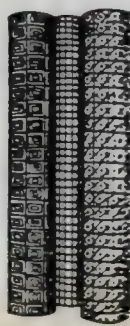

When doing your spring cleaning, remember our GIGANTIC FLEA MARKET on June 23, 1990. Contact any Kinette for more information.

Main Street undergoes facelift

Minden's Main Street has seen a lot of changes over the years, as this postcard from the early '60s demonstrates. And, beginning Tuesday the downtown core will see yet more improvements as work begins on the latest facelift. New lighting, crosswalks and benches are in store for the village once the project is completed.

Foot stompin' fun

There was a lot more than curling going on at the Minden Curling Club last weekend as some of the ladies put on a lively show for their guests at the end of the Sweep Into Spring bonspiel. Light-hearted entertainment has become a trademark with this popular bonspiel, and the ladies weren't about to let anyone down this year. They performed a few skits and then stormed the dancefloor with their hilarious jug band routine. The bonspiel marks the end of the curling season, but the club still has a few activities on the go. The annual awards banquet is slated for April 28 and the general meeting is this Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the club.

Around The County Town

by Mary Scott Call 286-1104

A warm welcome is extended to our "snow birds" and vacationers from the sunny south. Some of the following are ones I have seen or spoken; Jim and Helen Burton, Jim and Doris Grant, Roly and Mary Scott and Roy and Marjorie Windover. Welcome back.

Had a conversation with Betty Milford and she reported that she and Bill had a very enjoyable holiday and she would like us to support our museum by donation a $2 fee which goes to enhance our museum. Call Betty at 286-4880.

Marian Aggett reports that there was a 60th wedding anniversary party held at the Coe Hill Legion for Mom and Dad. Many relatives and friends gathered to wish them best wishes including daughter-in-law Willa and grandson David from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia and Warren and Debbie and Kelly Aggett from New Liskeard Ontario.

Wheels to Meals luncheon and euchre was held at the Minden Legion with prizes to the following: door prize Jack Chilton, low hand Agnes Mullen, lone hands Corinne Bonneville, high man Mitzi Alzner, high lady Shirley Elcome. Next luncheon and euchre will be held Tuesday, April 24. Call Muriel Proctor at 286-2733 or Nelda Yakely at 286-2872.

Don't use chemical-loaded commercial fertilizers. Make compost instead. Such messy fun - sort of a grownup's answer to mud pies - and a lot more productive; organic waste makes up about one third of household trash. Buy a compost bin or make your own - an old garbage can with holes punched in it will do or make a wood square and feed it leaves, grass clippings, fruit and vegetable peelings, eggshells and coffee grounds and all other kitchen waste. After each application of material, layer some sand or peat moss. A season later, dig the resulting humus into your garden. It will be most rewarding.

Winners of Legion

euchre April 5 included, most lone hands May Bradbury and Murray MacKinnon, high man and lay, Willard Bridgman and Maria Tschida and others Lorna Bridgman and Jack Weekes. Draw winners were Marie Dennie, Jack Chilton, Esther Lee and Hilda Harrison.

Sincere sympathy is extended to the family and friends of Arthur Parrish and Vera Fuller.

Club 35 euchre party winners from April 9 included Wally Harpur (50-50), Jim Foster (most lone hands), Sharon Hewson (high lady) and Ken Wallace (high man.) Other winners were June Huffman, Jim Irwin and Marion Irwin.

Club 35 bridge games

April 10, Vange Croucher was first followed by Thelda Weston and Lyle Lucas. Next games April 17 at 1 p.m. in Club 35.

Greeting from Staunworth Terrace

Sunday evening of April 1 was a very good time for us all. Irene Houghton's son brought his group called "Slim Pickins" and they gave us a very lively musical program, followed by a social visit and tea party. The group's players are John MacRae, Geordy Vincent, Stephen Kennedy and Gordon Houghton. Our thanks to you all gentlemen!

We welcome our Snow-birds and travellers home again. They look well and rested. We were glad they were here to enjoy the potluck supper with us on April 6. Our thanks to Jessie for the lovely cake to celebrate our April birthdays.

After supper we had a real treat when Mr. Rod Tousaw played his guitar and sang ballads, which we enjoyed. He also helped us sing songs from our songbooks - most of them better known to our generation - it was fun!

We look forward to spring and summer and hope to be able to enjoy outdoor barbeques soon.

We have euchre games and 7:30 p.m. Mondays and Cribbage at 1:30 p.m. Fridays.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray of Mulberry House, Moore Falls, who celebrated their 40th anniversary with a quiet dinner at the Schnitzel House, April 13.

Hi Kids!
Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given in the list. Find them by reading up, down, forward, backward and diagonally.

They are all in a straight line and do not skip letters. Circle the words in the diagram and cross it off the list.
It's as easy as that. Have fun!

*The love of friends,
The joy of birth,
The miracle of Mother
Earth,
The winter, summer,
Spring and fall,
I thank the Lord,
I've shared them all.*

The Carnarvon Church ladies brought and served a delicious lunch. Before and after the tea, Eleanor Hamilton played some of the songs from bygone days. Some of the ladies led the singing while others prepared to serve the tea which was enjoyed. Thanks to all the ladies who provided the tea and music. They were Mable Russell, Ruth Gorrie, Eileen Crawford, Sand Johnson and Eleanor Hamilton. We all joined in the singing. A special thanks to Grace Coburn for her lovely singing and Sandy Johnson who is one of our very faithful volunteers in preparing teas and doing whatever is needed to be done. We enjoyed it immensely.

In the evening we had bingo and Ed Fomenko came to call for us. We appreciate his coming very much.

Friday was Happy Hour. There was a good number there to enjoy the music by Don White, Charlie Hadley, Bill Geddis, Norman Graham and Bill Payne. They were joined later by Ray Jenkins and Bill Moore on the piano. Some residents did some dancing for the amusement of others. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins came from Belleville and everyone was glad to see them. Thanks to Ellen and Don Holden, Mary Guillemine, Donna Luke and Jankie Thomas the volunteers who looked after everyone's needs and Linda Fry who keeps everyone enjoying themselves.

Saturday, Ina McGuire returned from the Ross Memorial hospital after a week's stay. We are very glad to see you back again Ina.

Saturday evening Ruby Lewis was taken to Minden hospital when she became very sick. We are thinking of you and hope you will be back with us soon Ruby.

Don and Marge Sisson were to see Ina Sunday evening and attended our chapel hour with us.

Vera Archer had visitors Saturday, Helen Archer and a friend and on Sunday she had her niece and nephew to visit.

Jean Hewitt was here to see her mother, Pearl Lyle, Saturday morning.

The Sunday night chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess and Alice Jones played the organ. It was Palm Sunday service. We sincerely thank Rev.

Burgess and Alice.

Monday Evelyn Coleman came for bible study. She told us about four different accounts of women and described their characters. Each was was so different.

Tuesday Marjorie Rennick came for a hymn sing in the main lounge. She played the piano and sang. If we can, we join in. Thank you Marjorie for coming on such a nasty day too.

by Bill Scott, M.P.

The Mark of a Nation is the theme of this year's National Citizenship Week, which runs from April 15 to 21, 1990. This theme commemorates the Canadian flag's 25th anniversary, a quarter century throughout which the national flag has proudly symbolized the distinctive values and the unique spirit of Canadian citizenship.

National Citizenship Week was first proclaimed by the Prime Minister in 1987 to coincide with the 40th anniversary of Canadian citizenship. Each year since then, National Citizenship Week has been celebrated during the week of April 17, the anniversary of the proclamation of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

National Citizenship Week, more than being simply a celebration, is also intended to encourage Canadians to reflect on the values which animate Canadian citizenship. Among these citizenship values are a respect for and pride in Canada's diverse ethnic and linguistic heritage, and a commitment to the principle of equality for all Canadians, whether citizens by birth or by choice. Equally important are the Canadian spirit of community and sense of compassion which form the foundation of the country's unique social programs. In addition, through the events of National Citizenship Week, Canadians will be reminded of the nation's commitment to freedom and fairness; of the importance of citizen participation in the affairs of their country; and of Canada's leading role in the international community in areas as diverse as international peace and environment.

While National Citizenship Week educates Canadians about their rights as Canadian citizens, it also emphasizes the individual responsibility of each Canadian to uphold and protect these rights and the fundamental citizenship values which underlie them.

Nationwide, it is anticipated that close to 500 events will take place to mark National Citizenship Week. Among the hundreds of events planned are province-wide radio citizenship trivia contests, television shows dealing with citizenship issues and an exciting mix of art, music and theatre expositions. The voluntary and private sectors are lending their support to National Citizenship Week in a diversity of ways ranging from the organization of public panel discussions to the production of promotional videos. Also actively involved in the week are all levels of government, with Premiers and Mayors across the country officially proclaiming National Citizenship Week and hosting special National Citizenship Week events.

Federal government involvement in National Citizenship Week will be spearheaded by Gerry Weiner, Secretary of State and Minister of State for multiculturalism and Citizenship Week activities will be the presentation of the 1990 Citation for Citizenship to 25 Canadian individuals and organizations in recognition of their outstanding contributions to Canadian citizenship and the values it represents. A special launch to the week, the third annual presentation of the Citations will take place at a Parliament Hill ceremony on April 10th.

Past National Citizenship Weeks have proven extremely successful, involving Canadians from coast to coast and producing a growing public awareness of both the values involved in Canadian citizenship and the responsibility of all Canadians to ensure that they are upheld.

GST replaces existing hidden taxes

by Doreen Hawman

On January 1, 1991, the government is proposing to replace the existing federal sales tax with the GST, a 7 per cent tax on most goods and services sold in Canada.

You are already paying a federal sales tax on manufactured items, generally 13.5 per cent that is hidden in the cost of most goods and services you buy. The GST will replace this hidden tax with one that is visible, calculated at a single rate of 7 per cent. How will this affect you as a senior?

Once the GST is in place, lower income seniors will pay less tax. This will be accomplished through the GST Credit, to be paid by cheque four times a year. To apply for the credit you must complete a form included in the 1989 tax return. This means, even if you don't pay any income tax, you must file a return and complete the form to receive your credit.

Brochures explaining how the new tax will affect older adults are now available at your nearest information centre.

In Haliburton, the centre is located in the Drag River Municipal Building, Maple Ave., open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or call 457-2733. For residents of Minden and surrounding areas, the centre, located in the Anson, Hindon and Minden Municipal Building, is open Monday and Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or call 286-4100. If you live outside the toll free area, please call collect.

The Information centre will accept tax returns for preparation from seniors and low-income families until April 20, 1990.

New regulations make for safer bicycling

Minister of Transportation William Wrye announced several amendments to the Ontario Highway Traffic Act concerning bicycling.

"These amendments are designed to emphasize that a bicycle is a vehicle under the Highway Traffic Act and that drivers of these vehicles must obey the law and follow the rules of the road," Wrye said. "In turn, other motorists must respect their rights to the road."

The following are the amendments:

- a bicycle is now included in the definition of a vehicle.

- bicyclists must now identify themselves to the police, supplying their proper name and address, where an officer perceives them committing a traffic offence. This provides the police with the powers to enforce the law and deter unsafe riding behaviour.

- bicyclists are not permitted to ride their bicycles along a crosswalk or a pedestrian crossover. They must walk their bicycle across the road. This should improve safety at crossings and discourage bicyclists from darting across the road endangering the safety of pedestrians.

- bicyclists may now indicate a right turn by extending their right hand and arm horizontally. This is an alternative to the signal now permitted. This will be a safer and easier method of signalling for cyclists and will be more visible to motorists.

- bicycles must now be equipped with a proper braking system. This enhances bicycle control and provides the police with the power to charge bicyclists who drive without proper brakes.

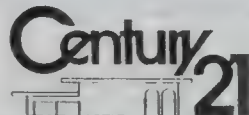

- a person walking a bicycle along a highway without sidewalks may walk on the right side of the highway — not facing traffic — provided it is unsafe for the person to cross the highway. This exempts cyclists, when dismounted, from having to follow the general rule that requires pedestrians to walk on the right-hand side of the road facing traffic.

"It is hoped that the new requirements will help to make these smaller vehicles safer to ride and more visible to other motorists," Wrye concluded. "By clarifying the rights and responsibilities of cyclists and encouraging other motorists to share the road with them, we expect a reduction in accidents."
